

Allie and Dani: When the Sun Comes Out Again

Allie and Dani are best friends. They love to play, laugh, share, and talk about everything. They always find time to go outside, make up games, and be together.

But one day, something changed. Dani did not want to go out and play, and Allie felt sad and confused. She did not understand what was happening. She only knew that she missed her friend.

Those days, it rained a lot. The sky was gray, the thunder was very loud, and the lightning lit up the night. Allie felt a little scared too, but she felt better when the sun came out again.

One afternoon, Allie talked to her mom, Lali. "Mom, I feel sad. I miss Dani, and the thunder scares me," she said. Lali held her hand and said, "It's okay to feel sad and scared. When you feel that way, come to me. You are safe here." Allie took a deep breath, and her heart felt calmer.

Lali listened to her, hugged her, and sang her a song. Together they smiled and waited for Dad to come home. That night, they read a story, prayed, and went to sleep with peaceful hearts.

The next day, Lali went to visit Dani's grandma. She brought a cheese treat made with love. When she arrived, she saw Dani sitting inside the house, looking at the cloudy sky through the window.

Lali went closer and said kindly,
“Thunder and lightning can sound very loud and scare us, but they don’t last forever. After the rain, the sun always shines again.”

Dani listened carefully. He understood that he was not alone and that it was okay to feel scared. Little by little, he felt brave again.

That day, when the sky started to clear, Dani went out to play with Allie. They laughed together again, knowing that even if the thunder comes back,
the sun will always come out again.

FINAL DEDICATION

For those who have ever felt fear, and for those who choose to be a hug, a home, and hope.
